

Females tend to have higher retention rates than males, and this association is statistically significant ($\chi^2[1] = 7.556, p = .006$). The percentage of both female and male students retained from their first to second year of study at Winthrop University was somewhat lower in 2018-19, as compared to years prior.